Seven New Profssrs Added to Faculty

Seven new professors have accepted positions on the LaGrange College faculty for the 1960-61 school year. Those of these visiting associate professors of sociology while his time is on a part-time basis of absence working on the doctorate.

Mr. Gup'till has taught for the past 22 years at Gammon Theological Seminary in Atlanta, retiring last spring. He has also served the Methodist church as pastor, District Superintendent, and missionary to Africa (1914-20). He is also active in his hobby of lecturing on missions. His hobbies are playing the piano and pipe organ. He is single.

Visiting Professor Brevy Jones, pastor of the First Methodist Church of this city since last summer, will teach a course in Pastoral Administration designed for student pastors. This course was added to the curriculum at the request of some of the pre-ministerial students. It will be taught for one hour each week.

Mr. Sidney Murray, a well-known tenor, has been named Associate Professor of Music. Mr. Murray recently graduated with highest honors from the University of Illinois. He received his master of music degree from the same University last month.

Mr. Murray has sung in professional opera and with several symphony orchestras. Last month he was tenor soloist for a presentation of Mozart’s "Coronation Mass" with the University of Illinois orchestra and chorus.

Visiting Professor Winnol Shangnessy, an expert in botanical field work, will be teaching a course here during the Fall quarter. He is research assistant with the Callaway Geodetic in Pilot Mountain.

Once a year we attempt to review and reinterpret the purposes of this publication and to set them forth for the student body. This is the year four-year college.

Editorials published in the HILLTOP NEWS are written, under usual circumstances, by the editor and the two associate editors. Guest editors, under ordinary circumstances, are identified with a "byline."

We are not interested in fitting in at individuals or groups editorially or otherwise. We find conditions which we feel should be altered and recognize tells us that we should speak out as strongly as campus, conditions permit. But we speak about issues, not against individuals.

The editors of this publication claim no immunity from our editorial comments. Often we use these columns as a medium, realizing that we are as guilty as these minor sins as the next fellow. Again, concurrence enters into the newspaper game.

Each student pays a small part of the expense of publishing the HILLTOP NEWS but, in turn, students have a right to suggest and to objectively criticize. But he should realize that the lack of putting out a newspaper is often difficult. We want to know how to improve it and make it more readable, but unfair criticism is unwelcome.

All letters to the editor of any merit will be published. We do not publish libelous material. All letters mailed or given to the editor should be signed by the writer, but names will be withheld on request if there is good reason to do so. So get out your pen and get those letters coming.

The door is wide open for all who would like to work on the newspaper staff. You can help make the HILLTOP NEWS a better paper. And your help will be greatly appreciated.
As freshmen one of the first things one learns is that there will be an orientation manual filled with answers to questions ranging from library science to mathematics. In a recent meeting, I read the chapter discussing study skills. The section on note-taking was particularly useful. I have already found many of the suggestions helpful. In the future, I plan to use the manual as a reference guide.

One of the main points made in the manual is the importance of effective note-taking. It emphasizes the need to review notes regularly to reinforce learning. I have found this to be true in my own experience. When I first started taking notes, I found it difficult to remember what I had written. However, by reviewing my notes regularly, I have been able to retain more information.

Another important point made in the manual is the need to organize notes in a way that makes sense. The manual suggests using a system of headings and subheadings to help organize information. I have found this to be very helpful. By organizing my notes in this way, I can easily find the information I need.

In addition to these general tips, the manual also provides specific strategies for different subjects. For example, it suggests using flashcards for memorization and mind maps for understanding complex concepts. I have found these strategies to be very effective.

Overall, I believe the orientation manual is a valuable resource for students. It provides useful tips and strategies for effective note-taking and study skills. I recommend that all freshmen take time to read through the manual and apply its suggestions to their own studies.
Who's Who On The Hill

This feature is published in order that new students may familiarize themselves with their teachers, administrators, and fellow students who have taken an active part in the life of the institute. This feature is self-explanatory with the following exceptions:

Geologically Speaking

Editor's Note: Prof. P. M. Hicks has responded to our request for a student's view of the Hill. His remarks have reached a state of sediment below, geologically speaking.

By Prof. P. M. Hicks

In response to several recent inquiries, an investigation into the possibility that the knoll where the college is located might be an extinct volcano was made. The search took the investigator into some of the unexplored regions of the area. The following paragraphs are the results of this exploration.

A thorough examination of the area indicates a strong possibility of the formation of the area by volcanic activity. The quiet intrusive type rocks are extensive sedimentary deposits. This indicates that the region has been denuded to a point. Geologic reports about the region were examined and field expeditions were made. The report indicates that the area formation belonged to the Crystal formation.

The investigation was the result of the metamorphic change of certain sedimentary rocks through the action of pressure and the accompanying heat brought about by the formation of the area by volcanic action.

As president of the Student Association, Miss Strickland, former member of Phi Beta Kappa, starred in the two-character play, "The Fourposter," which ran for six weeks.

Miss Strickland won the Elizabeth Ponder Award by vocalism at Sullins College, where she did her undergraduate work, and the outstanding drama award at the University of Alabama. She is a member of Alpha Delta Omegas, national honor drama fraternity.

Dr. Irvine S. Ingram will join the faculty in January after the completion of a 100-day trip around the world set for the Fall semester. The trip was financed by the Student Aid Fund for the Advancement of Education. This outstanding Southern educator will be filled with pride of education, teaching, and service in preparation. His primary interest lies in the history and philosophy of education.

MORAL: JOIN THE CHORUS

BY BETT LOWRY

The LeGrange Choral Choruses is a chorus of mixed voices, composed of about forty-five students who sing both sacred and secular music under the direction of Prof. Walter Washburn, director.

Dr. Irvine S. Ingram will join the faculty in January after the completion of a 100-day trip around the world set for the Fall semester. The trip was financed by the Student Aid Fund for the Advancement of Education. This outstanding Southern educator will be filled with pride of education, teaching, and service in preparation. His primary interest lies in the history and philosophy of education.

Dr. Ingram retired from West Georgia College in Carrollton last spring after 40 years as president and as principal of the college, graduated from the Fourth District A & M School.

The chorus is led by Mrs. Ruby Walker, chairwoman of the Department of Speech, Recreation, and Drama and Mrs. Ruby Walker, chairwoman of the Department of Speech, Recreation, and Drama, at the University of Georgia in Athens.

Each year, there are two major performances in which the chorus participates. One is the tour is destined for a city near you that your questions concern- ing year. This year's officers are president, Marianne Whelchel; vice-president, Hedy King; secretary, Dianne McBrayer; vice-secretary, Mary George Dean; treasurer, Fred McBrayer; business manager, Don Foster; and wardrobe chairman, Diane Scott.

Membership in the Choralaires has extended beyond the college to include any student who earns a member of the chorus. According to Mr. Westafer, there is an effort to make the chorus the place to which the Choralaires have traveled and will continue to do so. This year's officers are president, Marianne Whelchel; vice-president, Hedy King; treasurer, Fred McBrayer; business manager, Don Foster; and wardrobe chairman, Diane Scott.
