SPOTLIGHTS

by Dr. Joseph L. Kolar

The Curtain Raisers inaugurated the new academic year with John Patrick's "The Curious Savage." In spite of having passed through a major reorientation and re-evaluation of new talents the first play under the direction of Miss Arnett and Miss Strickland suggested already that the Curtain Raisers may have a successful year.

Patrick's play presents a theme of extreme interest. Patrick provides the inmates of "The Cloisters" with all the trappings of a cold comedy mixed with a bitter humor cultured by an inner sensibility of the infinite darkness. Cruel and impassable is the outside world, without sincere interest in the suffering of others, with a heart not able to conceal the unconvincing beneath the human mask.

Mary Ann Wages with her well-controlled performance created a very refined atmosphere for the inner world, the world of feeling, beauty and understanding. The author himself asks for warmth and dignity, and the audience has received the characterization of individual roles by Larry Thomas as Jeffrey, Beti Lowrey as Florence, Andy Owen as Hannibal, Call Woodriff as Fairy Mae, and Barbara Bates as Mrs. Patty with enthusiasm. Angela Avant helped to give the right interpretation to the human drama. Michael Lane in Dr. Emmett was very sincere. Cynthia Bennett as Lily Belle, Dean Brown as Titus, and Billy Haernberg as Samuel were a good team and contrasted this world of inner simplicity and reconciliation with a display of bourgeois hypocrisy, self-interest, and social snobbery.

And both these worlds stand rooted in the mother soil of human history, the inner world with all its intangible beauty and the outer world with all its false and hasty assumptions, and where, in the whole realm of time could we unveil the meaning of eternal beauty? In the immortal soul of a FOOL, maybe.

FRESHMAN SPONSORS

The freshman class, meeting last night at the gym, chose Dr. Roger S. Guptill and Prof. P.M. Hicks as their sponsors. The class also nominated Sarah Crews as their candidate for Homecoming Queen.

STUDENT (from the back of the room): "Are you sure the third test question is in the book?"
PROF: "Certainly."
STUDENT: "Well, I can't find it."

PROF: "A fool can ask more questions than a wise man can answer."
STUDENT: "No wonder so many of us flunk our exams."
