JOHN A. LABAREE,
DUPONT EXECUTIVE,
CHAPEL SPEAKER

LaGrange College will have as its speaker for chapel on Wednesday, November 27, Mr. John A. Labaree, manager of the Southern District of DuPont's Extension Division. Mr. Labaree has an international public relations background, which includes speaking and writing in several languages and many countries.

Mr. Labaree came to DuPont in 1954 from the field of education where his activities ranged from the athletic field to the public relations office, and from the classroom to the president's office. At DuPont, he works in the fields of international marketing, product publicity and editorial writing.

From Mr. Labaree's headquarters in Atlanta, Ga., he travels extensively throughout the southern third of the United States, appearing before University and other educational organizations, civic groups, industrial gatherings, and technical societies.

Mr. Labaree, who is a graduate from Wesleyan University, has done advanced study at Harvard and the University of Paris. He will present an address entitled "The Menace of the Misunderstood".

Talk about fraternity spirit! If it hasn't been for millions of gallons of blood, we never have won that trophy.

Tri-phase Activity Plan Sparks Music Dept.

BY SUE LAHWORNE

Three phases of activity are planned by the LC Music Department. The department, headed by Dr. John D. Anderson, will be presenting music recitals, sponsoring a district music festival, holding concerts and a music clinic in the near future.

Last Saturday the Music Department presented a clinical with Dr. Tamlin from Auburn University.

In addition, the Music Department has purchased new instruments, including three new clarinets and a new flute. The class using these instruments has a class enrollment of 17, which is an all-time high for an instrument class.

There will be a brass instrument class in the spring and it is anticipated that several new brass instruments will be required at first time.

The net value of our instrument holdings has tripled since September of this year.

Dr. Anderson says, "The Music Department stands ready and eager to provide the LC student body with a band concert, jazz dance, pop band, or an orchestra, when student interest is such that it is possible to produce such a thing."

LC Choralaires Stage 'A Ceremony Of Carols'

The Choralaires presented "A Ceremony of Carols" by Brittain and "Rejoice, Beloved Christians" by Dietrich Buxtehude on Wednesday night, November 20, at Trinity Methodist Church in LaGrange. It was given again on Sunday, November 24, at Trinity Methodist Church in Opelika, Ala.

The concert was directed by Mr. Paul Doster.

This concert will be given for the college on December 4 at the regular chapel service.

Oral Polio Vaccine Offered To Students

Oral polio vaccine will be available to all LaGrange College students free of charge Monday night, December 2.

The vaccine is made possible to all citizens of Troup County by the LaGrange Kiwanis Club. The first dosage will be given in the Simpson Room, Monday night, December 2, from 6 until 8 p.m. Persons 18 years of age or older will be required to get parental permission before the vaccine can be administered.

The LaGrange Kiwanis Club has urged all students to take this precaution before the vaccine can be administered. However, if the student is unable to pay, the vaccine will still be administered.
The President of the United States is dead. He died at 1:00 EST in a Dallas, Texas, hospital just thirty minutes after being shot with a foreign rifle while riding in a parade.

He was buried yesterday in Arlington National Cemetery. Those are the facts. What are we, as American college students, to learn from them? John Kennedy told us that we were moving into a New Frontier, where people would gain the long-sought freedom on which America is built. In his firm, New England accent John Kennedy tried to guide us, to show us where we are going, and why.

Now, in a very true sense of the word, our leader is dead. In life he was a mortal man striving for what every American dreams of. In death he is a symbol that should serve to guide us in the years to come.

On a crowded Dallas street, John F. Kennedy paid the price for freedom. But this is not the first time that freedom has been bought. It was bought at Normandy, the Marne, and on the Brecina Road. Men paid for it heavily on Guadalcanal and two Jima, Gettysburg and Antietam.

John Kennedy was the symbol of an age, an age of youth and vitality. We at LaGrange College will be moving into our prime in a very few years. We can profit from Kennedy's youth and his action.

His strength and his courage supported the peace for which he stood. It was a peace not of concession and of backslide after backslide. It was the "take a stand in Cuba" type of peace.

The road to peace which the past President was so carefully constructing has been greatly hindered by his assassin. This is, in the opinion of this writer, the greatest tragedy of a very great tragedy.

Not only has the President become a symbol of peace in this nation, he had become a symbol of the peaceful intentions of this nation. The messages of sympathy and of sorrow which were sent to Mrs. Kennedy, to President Johnson, and to all of America by the heads of state of the other nations of the world were not simply diplomatic obligations. Beneath the wording of these telegrams there seemed to be a sincere acknowledgment that the nation that must lead the world to peace has lost a very great leader.

The assassination seems real now. The strange lack of ability to comprehend that existed on Friday afternoon and on Saturday has, for the most part, passed. Only a few more times in the next few weeks will the thought come to us in the middle of the day or late at night and seem unreal for that few moments. And, as the tide of immediate sorrow ebbs, a new sense of responsibility flows.

Tomorrow will bring forth another day.

Strength. Peace.

BY FRED BROWN

The man who was killed last Friday had come to embody many of the ideals of the American people. In the three years that he served America as President of the United States we had come to trust his to act in the best interest of our nation.

Many of course, dissented from the opinion of the President and his policies, but then this is not new in America. It is desirable in our bi-partisan system of government. But still John F. Kennedy had become a symbol in America, a symbol of strength and of courage and a symbol of peace.

He was buried yesterday in Arlington National Cemetery. He died at 2:00 EST in a Dallas, Texas, hospital just thirty minutes after being shot. The work will continue through strength, through courage, through friendship and cooperation with other nations. The work will continue to carry that standard and will continue to do so for a number of years to come.

The period of mourning has passed now and we must repair the road to peace damaged by the deranged assassin. The work will continue through strength, through courage, through friendship and cooperation with other nations. The work will continue to carry that standard and will continue to do so for a number of years to come.

A line from Shakespeare's Julius Caesar, "When beggars die, there are no comets seen. The heavens himself blaze unreal for that few moments." perhaps gives the greatest insight into the tragic assassination of John Fitzgerald Kennedy.

As one looks back in retrospect he can observe his own feelings as well as the feelings of others.

The grave and mournful words — "Ladies and gentlemen, the President of the United States, John F. Kennedy, is dead," are unaccessible.

To many these words a brought a flow of grieving tears. Men and women alike wept unashamedly. Never since the death of Christ has the death of one person touched so many lives in so many nations. John Kennedy was related by birth to Ireland, by marriage to England, by ties of government to every other country in the world.

No other President has by his actions or characteristics resembled the greatness of the 16th President, Abraham Lincoln, as has the late President Kennedy. Their times were hard, their actions courageous, their death tragic by assassination.

So, it is altogether fitting as we look forward to another day that we as Americans, as everyone in America, should be as the words of Lincoln:

"Let us here highly resolve that the government of the people, by the people, and for the people shall not perish from this earth."

The thirty-fifth President is dead. . . . the thirty-sixth President has been sworn in.

We are facing tomorrow.

Tomorrow will bring forth another day.

A line from Shakespeare's Julius Caesar, "When beggars die, there are no comets seen. The heavens himself blaze unreal for that few moments. "Education is the only thing we're willing to pay for and not get" — that's the sort of statement one would expect to hear from Mr. Roger Guptill, a dedicated professor and friend of the LaGrange College students. He is devoted to the task of teaching students both intellectually and spiritually, and throughout his lectures has interwoven his sparkling humor. Students still remember his chapel program about two years ago in which he displayed his humor in relating his missionary work in Africa.

Mr. Guptill was born in Berwick, Maine, along the border between Maine and New Hampshire. He attended college in Maine, and preached during that time. He went to Theological school in Boston and then preached in Kingston, New Hampshire.

In May of 1914, Mr. Guptill began his missionary career in Africa. He was district supervisor, builder, missionary, "just a Jack of all trades", while there. The Africans even gave him a nickname, "Banze Mpuya", which means King of the Monkeys. Of this work, Mr. Guptill said, "I enjoyed it very much." Due to an operation he had to return to the United States in February of 1928.

Mr. Guptill preached in Limestone, Maine, and Bondville and West Springfield, Mass., until 1938, when he came to Gammon Theological Seminary in Atlanta, Georgia. Here he taught Negro college graduates until he retired in 1960. In 1969, he had retired as a regular minister in the North Georgia Conference after serving for 49 years.

Learn Computer Talk

LC students and professors will have an opportunity today to become better acquainted with the technical language of computers and computer programming. Mr. Julian C. Bugg of the Oak Ridge Traveling Lecture Program, Oak Ridge, Tenn., will speak on the fascinating subject at 3 p.m. in the Bailey Room of Manget Building.

Mr. Joby of the Mathematics Department, which is sponsoring the lecture, said all math majors, some business administration students, and some local high school students will attend. Others interested in the subject are invited, but warned that seating will be limited.

Mr. Bugg works in the area of mathematics and computer programming for E. I. duPont deNemours and Company. He is a mathematics graduate at the University of Georgia.

North Georgia Conference

Mr. Guptill came to Lagrange and taught here, substituting for his son, Dr. Carleton Guptill while he was working for his Ph. D. This winter quarter he is doing the same for Mr. C. F. McCook. "Next quarter," he says, "I'm going to be lazy."
