GROUNDS BROKEN ON NEW DORM

Construction of a five-story dormitory at LaGrange College which cost almost $1 million was started recently.

Scheduled for completion by the Summer Quarter, 1970, the 146-student facility will be the first building in the college's recently announced $5 million "Margin of Distinction" development program.

Charles D. Hudson, LaGrange, chairman of the LC trustees' buildings and grounds committee, said the appointments include Miss Nancy T. Alford, assistant professor of health and physical education; Miss Patricia K. Marks, assistant professor of English; Peter M. Thomas, assistant professor of political science and history; and Phillip

NEW ADMISSION COUNSELOR

A LaGrange College graduate and former high school teacher has been appointed as an admissions counselor at the college.

He is Carl D. Lockman, whose addition to the LC staff was announced by Sidney S. Tate, director of admissions and financial aid.

The new admissions counselor will contact and counsel high school and junior college students with regard to attending LaGrange College, Tate said.

As a counselor on the college admissions staff, Tate continued, "Since LaGrange College's Margin of Distinction development program expects to provide more facilities for an increased enrollment, we are increasing our efforts to see as many qualified candidates as admissions possible.

Mr. Lockman brings an excellent background in his new position, and the college is fortunate to have a man of his capacity and loyalty to represent it," Tate added.

President Richard M. Nixon said the publication "presents a most fitting testimonial to the uniqueness of our young people, but also to their awareness of the debt which they owe their free society."

Mrs. Burgess said Biggar, a native of Martin, is currently acting in the Greater New York City area, having been seen recently in the role of the old Shakespearean actor in "The Fantasticks" at the Club Bene in Morgan, N.J. Within the last year he toured the South in the role and also performed in "Godspell." When not performing he is employed as a research assistant with the Board of College Education of the Lutheran Church in America.

Baker formerly was director of drama and assistant professor of English and drama at Lenoir-Rhyne College, Hickory, N.C. After graduating from LaGrange College in 1956, he earned a master's degree at the University of Georgia and his doctorate in drama at Florida State University. He is a Baptist and a life member of the first Baptist Church of Florence.

Becham, a native of Thomaston, is librarian in the AEDC Library of ARO Inc. at Arnold Air Force Station, Tullahoma, Tenn. He has co-authored an in-plan report on EM, diffusers and jet pumps and written several library-oriented publications for local use. He also is chief lobbyist for the First Presbyterian Church of Tullahoma.

CHRISTIAN WITNESS

believe that one of the most inspiring places in the world is the Jefferson Memorial. In Washington D.C., I have always loved the writings of this man, especially the words that are inscribed around the circumference of this Memorial. There, emphasized over all the great writings of this gifted man, are these words, "I have sworn upon the altar of God eternal fidelity to every form of tyranny over the mind of man." I have always pictured Jefferson as he angrily dashed these words off to the English Parliament or to old King George himself. However, I recently discovered that it just didn't happen that way. These words were written long after the Revolution and were written to some good old U.S. citizens. They were written to free, independent, honorable to fine, upstanding, honorable citizens who had just one glaring fault, they wanted to make every- one else think like they thought. As the beginning of a school has been much on my mind, these words of Jefferson have taken on a fresh meaning for me. Tyranny over a man's mind can take many forms, it can even occur in an educational setting. Thus, if a professor tells you that his teaching and testing methods are none of your business, he's wrong. If an administrator tells you that the administration of this college is none of your affair, he's wrong. If the officials of this City of LaGrange tell you that city government is none of your affair, he's wrong. If a friend of yours is all our business, this city, college, city business, state, nation and world. I think there is a real connection between these words of Jefferson and those of John Donne when he says, "Every man's death doth make a man."

This could well be broadened to say that every man's failure diminishes my success. Add to this a realization that we are not met here only to prepare, but to begin and realize that great days of great adventure lie ahead of us this year. The task will be hard, the burdens will be heavy, and the road long. But how we now vow to be equal to it all, know that there is help for those who will seek it, "Come unto me, all ye that are heavy laden." ZEALAH.

LaGrange College was probably at its peak in its 1969 academic year in September with its most stable faculty in recent years.

The Lowdsey brothers, Isador and Herman, have spent more than 50 years as a lay reader in his church and as an officer of the Wesley Foundation at the University of Alabama.

LaGrange's summer seminar in Israel was considered a success by students and faculty alike.

Before the LaGrange party left the kibbutz, the foreman of the pair of orchards presented each man with a memento - a small print of an Israeli landscape. Such gift-giving was certainly recommend the seminar type tours.

The LC trio includes Brendan B. Beek, associate professor of history, who will begin study at the University of Alabama in Miss. Virginia P. Cansley, assistant professor of health and physical education, who will return to Auburn University in 1969; and William E. Reeves, associate professor of health and physical education and director of Athletics, who will resume studies at the University of Alabama.

The trip included Ben and Berta Lowdsey, their daughter Carol, and three of the 46 professors who taught during the 1968-69 term and are all three returning toward completion of doctoral degrees.

The seminar went to the Kibbutz Hillel ("The Beautiful"). It located five miles west of Hadera on the road to Haifa. In existence for 15 years, the commune's primary crops are plums and pears and these provided the LC group's work schedule.

The students spent their mornings in the orchards, and even had tea each day with Celia Melissa Elam of Tampa, Fla., reporter, "We got up at four every morning because we had to be out in the orchards picking plums by 6:30 a.m."

They worked in the orchards six days a week and rested on "Shabbat" (Sabbath). But the experience was not all work, however. The afternoons were free, and the LC students utilized them in various ways.

One student reported, "We'd been there a week or so when they realized that we were there to work hard, see their country, and learn about their customs. As a matter of fact, it turned out that we were the most sought after workers on the kibbutz.

Yita, the kibbutz where the group was located, has 960 members - slightly larger than average size.

The communal farms became popular in Israel after World War II when large scale political refuge from Europe, streamered into the newly formed nation of Israel. To accommodate these refugees, those religious provided them land to recuperate from the fertile lands which were they found what I was expecting to find much of interest, and I found what I was expecting. It's unlikely that anyone will apply to teach in the college as a professor of English for three weeks.
